Use this sheet to highlight the letters your child identifies independently with no help from you. Use a specific color and record the date. Then do it again in a few weeks or months and use a different color that time and each subsequent time so you have an accurate record!

Can you color the white spaces to match?

Try these activities with your child ...

- Gather 10 of an object (pop poms, small erasers, blocks, etc.), lay them out in a row and ask your child to touch each one as s/he counts 1-10. Watch to see if your child can count 1:1, meaning s/he touches one object as s/he says one number and then moves on to the next object. If s/he cannot do this, offer assistance by modeling how to take a finger and move the counted object over to the side and then move on doing the same with the rest.
- Lay out a simple pattern ABABAB of objects and see if your child can tell you what comes next.
- Ask your child to count out loud as high as s/he can
- Open a book and ask your child if s/he knows where the words are...see if s/he points to the words on a few different pages. This is not to see if s/he can READ, it is to assess print awareness-knowing that we actually read the words!
- Find colored objects and ask your child to name the colors,
- Ask your child to say his/her name.
- Check your child's pencil grip, compare it to the one seen here.
